

The Socialist Party offers our condolences to the victims of the recent tragedy at the Austin IRS building. The victims, including the pilot, are casualties of an economic system which turns worker against worker and fails to provide the basic needs for millions while bailing out banks and corporations.

A grassroots political response to the injustices of capitalism and a political movement that gives a voice to working people is what we need most in this country. Such a re-awakening will allow us to become active creators of a more progressive future. Organizations, such as the Socialist Party USA, are working to build such movements and are open to all those seeking to struggle for justice.
